

LAWYER TELLS OF ARSENAL IN GLOVER HOUSE

COMPLETE story of Hattie Le Blanc trial in the 10 P. M. Edition of the BOSTON AMERICAN on the same day. You don't have to wait for the morning papers. Verbatim testimony and all the incidents of the great

The dying statement of Mrs. Haddaway, "God Is My Life"—which she wrote with a pencil and handed to Mrs. Sargent, her house-keeper, a few minutes before passing away, showed the dominant thought which even to the last characterized the noted woman. This thought had for years been the basis of her metaphysical teachings. It had buoyed her up through what fort of the committee from the White House and upon its report that it had performed its duty and that the President would communicate to Congress in writing, the Senate advanced until tomorrow out of respect to the memory of those members who have died since the last session. The House galleries were crowded to the doors in expectation of a lively session, but in this they were disappointed. The debate that had occurred since the adjournment last June served to postpone the receipt of the President's message, which will read to-morrow.

either Mr. Johnson or to Hattie? A.—

Elmore Was the Goods.

Q—Where are the goods now? A—At the Elmore Hotel. The hats are there since a few days before the last day of the trial.

Q—Had you then taken them you as the chief officer? A—Never.

Q—How did they get to your brother? A—I requested William E. Haine, brother of the deceased, to go to the Elmore Hotel to ascertain if there was a package of Hattie's clothing there and if so, to bring it to my office.

Q—Did you go at any time the Hattie was in the Elmore house? A—Normally did not.

Q—Did you believe Mr. Shreve to give up Hattie or anything of the kind? A—Never.

Q—In answer to the question of the letter to the Elmore Hotel written by the attorney for the lawyers of the defendant, who did you do? A—I spoke to Mr. Johannes and I told him I would be glad to get there and that I would agree to Mr. Johannes. I told Mr. Johannes that I had

Q. Did I not in March, demand from you that you give me this clothing? A. I couldn't say. You did utter, but I don't remember when.

Q. Did you remember that on March 1, Mr. Brown sent you a registered letter asking for the clothing belonging to Irene and Lillian? A. I don't remember.

Gifts to Freeman Children.

A. Attorney Elinore was then shown a copy of the letter and was then asked:

Q. Does that refresh your memory? A. Yes, it does.

Q. And you then advised the children, Judge Bond said. This matter was brought up in the trial, and Lillian's clothing may be introduced to show whether the detention of Hattie Brown was in bad faith? A. Yes, I don't care any more for Irene or Lillian's clothing.

A. Attorney Johnson instructed him to leave his bias and see if he couldn't Q—On or about March 7 and you a written demand from me for illegible something? A—I have some letters to grip down stairs.

Q—A court officer was sent for the grip. Q—On or about Christmas, 1909, you sent a present of $40 to each of your children? A—Yes.

Q—How many children are there? you sent this present to? A—Four five.

Q—Were you in the habit of sending presents to them? A—No.

Q—You never knew them before

Q—Have you bent them any present since? A—No.

"Memory Just the Same."

Q—Have rested at the inquest, did she? A—I can't tell you.

Q—Weren't you there? A—I was there one day.

Q—Did you see Hare? A—I do recall. I think she was present at a of the hearings, anyway.

Q—And she's one that you gave $

A—Yes.

Mr. Elmore's grip was now handed him

Q—Did you see him, after he was released, on March 7. He finally found it and returned it to Mr. Johnson, asked.

Q—Did you recently pay an execution against George Freeman in his behalf?

A—An execution for what?

Q—I don't know, we may find out later.

A—No, I don't remember.

Q—Or have you settled an account with one of the deputy sheriffs for Mr. Freeman's money. Have you paid any money in behalf of Mr. Freeman? A—I don't recall. I cannot be looking at the record.

Q—You can't remember? A—No.

Q—Your memory is not as good as

Letters Are Produced.

Q.—When? A.—I can't say exactly.
Q.—Find my letter of March 26 there in your bag? A.—I have no letter of that date.
The witness was then shown a registered receipt.
Q.—Is that your signature? A.—Yes.
Q.—What's the date? A.—March 26.
Q.—You did receive that letter then? A.—I can't say. I directed my clerk to search through the files and he did not give me any letter of that date.
Q.—Is this not a copy of the letter which you were asked to produce for me, March 26?

Q—Did he also consult you on 50? A.—If my testimony at the trial says so, it is so. I have no doubt what he did.

Afforney Johnson then picked up a sheet of paper from the table and approached the witness asked:

Q—Now, Mr. Elmore, will you be enough to give us another sketch of the marks which you say you saw on the bed frame? A.—With the understand-

Q—When did you first attempt to diagram them? A—I attempted to diagram them for His Honor the other day.

Q—The second drawing was then made by you?

A—Yes.

Q—When you drew these for His Honor?

A—Yes.

Q—Did you diagram them at the time you were in the laundry?

A—No.

Comment by the Judge.

Q—When did you first attempt to diagram them? A—I attempted to diagram them for His Honor the other day.

Q—The second drawing was then made by you?

A—Yes.

Q—When you drew these for His Honor?

A—Yes.

the other day you drew first a set resembling the marks on the laundry, and then another set of marks which had been on the floor of the library gymnasium and a third set of which you declared you had seen, and which you declared were the as those on the laundry floor. Now did you see those other marks? did not name any specific occasion, not know that I was expected to be present at any particular time or place.

marks you drew? A.—I did not draw marks of any particular occasion,
I drew marks like in kind and character
those on the laundry floor.
Attorney Johnson got the other piece of paper from Judge Bond on which more had drawn, the other day and said
Q.—Now, which are the marks here
I can't tell which are the marks on the Laundry floor. Those are in laundry, but that is not my handwriting.
I believe you'll find the gymnasium marks have not a single mark like marks in the laundry," said Judge Bond.
I am going to show them to the jury.

Higgins a Will Witness.

Q—What is this other set of that you drew? A—I attempted to make like in kind and character to the laundry floor.

Q—As a matter of fact, Mr. E. didn't you simply try to copy your drawing of the marks on the laundry.

A—Why I tried to make them all had the other drawing before me.

Q—Alike in length? A—I think so.

Q—In angle? A—Yes, I guess

Q. In relative position? A.—Yes.
Q. Tell us now where you ever saw marks alike in relative position, in and in length in those you saw laundry? A.—Well, these marks themselves symmetrical.

Attorney Johnson then offered to draw lines on exhibits and showed the jury.

Q.—Was Mr. Higgins a witness in Glover's will? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did she have anything in her left hand? A.—At one time she had a shoe.

Q.—Did you put an electric flashlight on Mattie's index finger? A.—No.

Q.—Saturday you testified in great detail about seeing a black mark on a man on Mattie's index finger. By what illumination did you see it with such distinctness? A.—By the illumination of the moon.

very good French scholar. This letter is written in French. I have no other letters so far as I know.

Johnson Gets the Letter.

Q.—If any other letters are found, are you willing that counsel for Hattie shall have them? A.—I'd like to read them but I'll answer to that.

"Very well, that's all," said Mr. Johnson, and Mrs. Glover stepped down from the witness stand. Mr. Elmore was then recalled, and before being questioned he told Mr. Johnson that he would like to have the letter back for use in his case.

"I didn't agree to give it back at any time," said Mr. Johnson. "Mrs. Glover has stated that she is willing that I should see it. If I can find the letter at any time you are at liberty to examine and to report. It is in my possession and I do not intend to part with it."

"I submit that Mr. Johnson has no right to the possession of that letter and that it is his duty to deliver it up," said Mr. Higgins, stamping to his feet. "It was given to me with the intention of not getting it back."

Judge Bond said: "If the letter belongs to Mr. Johnson's client, it should go back to him."

"I understand that Mrs. Glover claims this as her property," said Mr. Higgins. "If your Honor says that is not her property and not the property of Little Leona Blane, I am content, but I would like to have it tipped to me to recover."

"I have no objection to Mr. Johnson giving the letter but I don't want to be accused of giving up property which may belong to Mrs. Glover,"

Elmore Is Cut Short.

"It is my understanding," began Elmore, "No, no," said Judge Bond. Elmore continued his talk and Attorney Johnson said: "The Court says, NO." "Very well," replied Mr. Elmore.

500 Dolls Free!

Such dear dolls as these are. They are "Really truly dolls," as children say. Each one has eyes that open and shut, a head that turns so prettily, arms and legs that move just like live arms and legs; beautiful brown hair, lovely complexion and complete clothing. The clothing is just what a doll should have, fashionable dress, a "Stunning hat," as Mamma would say, shoes and stockings, and all that.

Who Write the Best Letters on the Subject:

"What am I going to do to make someone else happy on Christmas?"

That's All There is to It, Children!

Of course, we are all going to try to make someone happy on that wonderful day. You are not going to think of yourselves alone, are you, boys and girls? All the little children will be interested in this contest. Every little girl wants a beautiful doll. Every boy who writes a letter and gets a doll can make his little sister, cousin or friend very happy. That's the Christmas spirit! The letters must be short. Remember the subject.

"What am I going to do to make someone else happy on Christmas?"

Here Are a Few Rules, Then, About This Letter Writing:

Keep to the subject. Write your name, age, address and the school you attend. Address the letter: Doll Editor, P. O. Box 5242, Boston. Get your letter in early. Letters will be received up to six p. m. Wednesday, December 14. Any letters arriving after that time will not be opened. On the following Sunday, December 18, the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will publish the full list of children receiving the 500 dolls, also some of the best letters.

CAVALIERE ILL. MAY NOT COME TO BOSTON OPERA.

PAULIN, Dec. 5.—Luis Cavalieri may not go to America this season, but if she stays away it will not be on account of "Sherrill" but on account of the Cavalieri family.

A close friend of the diva said today that Luis is not trying to dodge a "society" in fact, would run toward it, but her physician has not only ordered her to take any journey soon, but has also indicated that she may not be able to fulfill any contract entered into.

He has advised her not to make any engagement until her health is restored.

It is said here that she has in contact with Mr. Russell of the Boston Opera Company, and that she has been working for her with a view to a new contract.

ANIMAL RESCUE LEAGUE FAIR

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.
While the Christmas spirit is running high in the world of fashion every effort of any charity there is patronized must surely be those which are of the most practical benefit to the poor.

This is the one time of the year when even the most practical and pompous society must come right down to earth and work—yes, work, as sales girls, house girls, waitresses or whatever other part of the group falls to her lot—must do it willingly and cheerfully—for charity.

The Animal Rescue League fair, which comes today at City Hall, will be one of the most important of the year, and society has been working for weeks for its success.

The fair will be quite the feature of the year. A new and novel departure will be the Boston Cat Club table, on which will be a table for the most beautiful of felines, of various colors and sizes.

Mr. J. L. Byrne will preside, with Mrs. Philip Byrne and Mrs. G. H. Bryant. Mrs. Byrne has also furnished a doll for the fair.

Miss W. W. W. will preside at the table for the most beautiful of felines, of various colors and sizes.

Elevated Railroad Extension, and Where Does the Public Come In?

The joint board composed of the Rapid Transit Commission and the Elevated Commission which has heard the application of the Boston Elevated Railroad for an extension for a long period of time of the lines under which it now controls the existing subways of Boston, will soon report its recommendation to the Legislature.

No consideration of this exceedingly important subject is complete, and therefore no recommendation based upon it can be weight, unless the whole question of earnings of the Boston Elevated railroad and of its leased company, the West End Street railroad, is investigated together with its method of accounting, its economies in the expenditure of the vast sums of money for maintenance and operation, the character of some of its expenditures, the amount it charges off to depreciation and all of those important subjects of accounting which must be investigated and considered before anyone knows what are the earnings and profits of this great business enterprise.

In dealing with the control of our subway system to-day, we are dealing with the control of the whole transportation problem here in the future.

When Boston gives the Elevated railroad a long lease of the main arteries of our subway system, even though in the development of the city these present subways ultimately become but a fraction of the whole system, there is given to that corporation the control of rapid transit in Greater Boston during the whole time for which we lease to it the present subways.

Nothing can be more important than this question, and they would be reckless man, without public spirit or a proper sense of decency, who should give for many years to come a private business interest the mastery of all the means by which the people of this community are enabled to get from one place to another.

On the plainest general principles, with the strange and wonderful developments of science which change so often and quickly the problems of transportation, it is wrong to tie the hands of other men to-morrow, unless under the strongest compulsion of circumstances.

Nobody knows what the character of the problems of to-morrow will be. And it is settled public policy, not denied by any right-minded man, that those problems should be settled, as far as it is possible, by men who do.

When a corporation asks the public authorities to place them in a position which commands the future, the corporation should be willing and expect that an investigation which involves every business transaction and concern of that corporation be made without any reference to any of its statements. For such an investigation will help the public to decide more wisely whether to grant or reject the request of the company.

The position of the Boston Elevated, is, briefly, that the company cannot afford, with its present earnings, to assume the rentals of the subways now authorized and under construction unless it be granted long leases of all the subways.

If this question were even an ordinary business transaction between the public and a corporation, it would be businesslike for the public to investigate the methods of the company to ascertain for itself the earnings of the road, since, by the position which the company takes, those earnings become most important to a consideration of the period for which the subways shall be leased.

No reflection is intended upon the management of the Boston Elevated railroad when it is said that such an investigation ought to be made, and ought to be thoroughly made, before the road is granted a controlling position in the transportation problems of the future.

It is a plain, ordinary, business suggestion which would be proper even if the question were not of transcendent importance to this great metropolitan community.

If a director of the Boston Elevated had a private business which he wanted to sell to a friend, he would take no offense if that friend set his accountants to work to ascertain and report to him the earnings and profits of the business and the methods by which that business was conducted, and the possibilities of increasing the earnings and profits by wiser and more economical methods. If his friend did not make such an investigation, the director would be surprised and would conclude that his friend had no serious thought of purchasing.

There is another important consideration which should urge an investigation of the methods of the business management of the Boston Elevated.

By its charter, the Boston Elevated is required to share with the Commonwealth all dividends in excess of 6 per cent. per annum.

The Boston Elevated has never declared any dividend in excess of 6 per cent. Why not? The public do not know. They have no means of knowing, but they ought to know. There is but one way to find out, which is by such an investigation as is now suggested.

"HE GIVETH HIS BELOVED SLEEP"

Death of a Great Religious Leader

So widespread is the fame of Mary Baker Eddy that there is no country in the world that will not take note of her death.

Her extraordinary influence upon her generation will everywhere suggest comparisons or contrasts between her work and that of the seer who died in Russia a few days ago.

Count Tolstoi spoke to the intellect and Mrs. Eddy to the heart.

Nobody has any right to doubt the sincerity of either; though everyone will think and feel as he pleases—or as he can—concerning their wisdom and inspiration.

Thousands of homes in America and elsewhere have felt the cheer of her brave spirit—and will cherish her memory with the feeling that it is a reviving and inspiring presence.

But no reflective person can doubt the significance of the great rally of the human mind against the discouraging materialism of the nineteenth century—a revolt of the soul against mechanism and fate, in which this woman played so remarkable a part.

Mrs. Eddy's life was conspicuous among the forces working together to convince the world that the mind has more power over the body than had been supposed.

Ingenious but Fraudulent Scheme of a Clergyman's Wife
